Office about the ACP. Contacts and information since the November 20, 2017 summary are in blue.

Alliance to Protect Our People and Places We Live (APPPL)	Kay Reibold (Policy Advocate)	Repeated interactions with Gov. Office emphasizing their work with Nash County residents
Citizens	Cyna Woodard (ASU student), Maureen Linneman (Asheville)
Clean Water for North Carolina	Hope Taylor (Executive Director), Ericka Faircloth (Justice Organizer, Lumbee Tribe member)
Blue Ridge Env'tl. Defense League	Therese Vick (Organizer)	Concern that SCANA-Dominion merger opens the door to ACP expansion to SC. Says expansion undermines ACP arguments about need to meet NC demand, will limit already questionable economic benefits to NC, and will increase adverse environmental impacts on NC.
NC Env'tl. Justice Network	Naeema Muhammed (Organizing Director)
Concerned Citizens of Northampton County	Belinda Joyner (President)
Rachel Carson Council	Bob Musil (President & CEO)
Frack-free NC Alliance + 19 organizations	Hope Taylor + 19 organizations: EnvironmentalEE, 350 Triangle (Karen Bearden), No Fracking in Stokes, Appalachian Voices, River Guardian Foundation, Coastal Carolina River Watch, Nash County Stop the Pipeline (Marvin Winstead, Joe Poland), ...	con't ... Haw River Assembly, Medical Advocates for Healthy Air, Save our Sandhills, Down East Coalition, No Pipeline Johnston County, Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, Pee Dee Water, Air, Land and Lives
Chatham Research Group	Martha Girolami
Citizen	Constance Ambler	North Carolina undergraduate at Sewanee mailed a 2-page, typed letter arguing the potential degradation of NC's ecology (air, water, soil) doesn't outweigh putative economic benefits of and need for the ACP.
Center for Community Action	Donna Chavis	Lumbee Indian. Shared 18-page report by a panel of Lumbee Indians that recommends actions for a "Culturally Relevant Assessment of the ACP." Concern with ACP impacts on indigenous populations as well as acts of intimidation by ACP, LLC.
N.C. State Department of Forestry and Environmental Resources	Ryan E. Emanuel, Ph.D	NSCU professor in Dept of Forestry and Environmental Resources; Lumbee Indian. Concern, among other things, that FERC and NC have not fully recognized the ACP's disproportionate impacts on native populations. This is important because that recognition can help indigenous populations negotiate mitigation measures if ACP proceeds.
